Chapter 1 by Allison Sanders

I was in my bed and saw something glow on the other side of my room. At first i thought that it was my phone but it was on my book shelf the glow bounced off all the walls in my little room i got up out of bed walked slowly towards the light the book flew out of its place and my foot and i fell to the ground i got up again walked to the book again it opened again and sucked me into it and i hit the ground hard and every thing went black and dark i was scared.

i woke up i thought i was still in my room i was in a bed in a room but that was the thing the room was purple and had a lot of computers that i had never seen i got up and walked down the grand hall to the grand stair case to the neatly made table. a father and 7 kids i was i the musical sound of music this was my least favorite book ever i saw maria and the oldest kid and they came to the table soon after everyone sat down nobody saw me i was invisible know one could hear me either i just had to show them that i was here i had to figure all of this out i looked at my watch to see what time it was at home it was four in the morning i had two hours to get back home before my mother came to wake me up how was i going to do this?

I was wondering how i was going to get out of this story and i saw every one leave so i could go back to my room and figure out how to get out of this i came up with my plan if it did not work then i would be stuck in this book for ever that would be horrible.

I started my plan and it worked i was in my bed as soon as i knew it my mom came in five minutes later i was so tired i ate i See more of Story Wars i would remember my adventure for the rest of my life.
